I am so very proud of those residents from our neighborhoods who showed up last night at the council chambers. There was standing room only both inside and outside, and the sea of red, without saying a word, showed solidarity that our area would never accept short-term rentals here.

The Zoning Commission unanimously rejected the request to allow short-term rentals in our subdivision. The people who requested the variance still have the option to appeal this decision up until February 1st. Then the City Council will take a vote on this.

My appreciation goes to all who attended, spoke, braved the dampness and cold while they stood outside.
